Miriam decided a long time ago that as soon as her rumspringa came around, she would be out of her sleepy Amish community like a shot, indulging in all the excitement the outside world had to offer.

Spurred on by her mother, who wants her to travel the world, she goes to see the big city with her friend Henry.

But everything goes horribly wrong when he is hit by a car and ends up badly injured. Miriam is convinced it is all her fault.

Scared and confused, she rejects rumspringa and falls into spiritual turmoil.

Her faith deeply shaken and guilt weighing on her heart, she has questions about life and faith that not even the elders can answer.

When Miriam seeks the counsel of her family, her beloved father tells her that Henry is a good young man and a perfect potential husband. He advises that she move on with her life and not let the guilt eat away at her, unless she wants to become like the neighborhood loner, Amos.

Miriam had known Amos since she was a little girl. Something horrible had happened back when he was on his rumspringa and he never talked to anyone again. The only words he spoke were in prayer. He lived alone, tended his farm and had no relationships with anyone.

Convinced that Amos is the only one with the answers to her desperate questions, she tracks him down and tries to make him talk. Though she is clearly unwelcome, she only becomes more determined to find a way to unlock his mouth.

She never imagined she would find what she did.
