Liturgy and Justice: To Worship God in Spirit and Truth Anne Y. Koester

Liturgical celebrations and the work of justice are tightly woven threads of the same cloth. The essays in Liturgy and Justice explore this intrinsic relationship and its promise for the ongoing renewal of church life.

The authors write about the vision of the modern liturgical and social reformers, building just communities, reuniting worship and justice, globalization, rural life, church leadership, women in the Church, justice and prayer in Latino and African American communities, liturgy as a school of discipleship, forming catechumens as disciples, the catechesis of liturgy-justice, preparing just liturgies, and preaching justice.

Authentic discipleship demands that the already existing relationship between our liturgy and our mission as ministers of justice be lived. Those serving in all areas of church ministry will find this book helpful in striving for justice in the Christian life.

Essays and contributors are "Liturgy and Justice: The Legacy that Awaits Us," by Gilbert Ostdiek, OFM; "Rehearsing the Reign of God by Building Just Communities," by Eleanor Josaitis and Msgr. William Linder; "Worship and Justice Reunited," by Walter J. Burghardt, SJ; "People of Faith and Global Citizens: Eucharist and Globalization," by John P. Hogan; "The Lord's Table, the World's Hunger: Liturgy, Justice and Rural Life," by Br.
