Dina and Oscar meet at a pool party at the home of a mutual friend whom Oscar is visiting for a few weeks. They fall madly in love and although there's a physical distance that separates them they honestly believe that their love is strong enough to withstand the test. The romantic relationship that they create is beautiful and intense but short-lived. One moment of carelessness causes Oscar to fall prey to manipulation and this leads to a painful break-up. Dina feels betrayed by the man she adores and she decides to give up on love. As time goes by and she matures, she is faced with a dilemma: should she marry her boyfriend, Miller— a good, decent man who adores her but whom she doesn't love or should she wait for the real thing to re-appear in her life?

After her best friend gets engaged, Dina decides that maybe you only get one chance and she lost hers when she lost Oscar.
